

Kestrel are Recovinyl Partners

Environmental impact is much more than just a matter of conscience in today's building industry. In 2009, Kestrel was the first in our industry to sign a partnering agreement with Recovinyl committing to recycling post-consumer PVC-U and PVC waste. This meant our customers could rest assured that they were buying from a responsible manufacturer.

Recovinyl is to encourage the recycling of PVC waste. It is based on the original initiative of Vinyl 2010 / VinylPlus which set out various infrastructures for post consumer recycling. The scheme has met all its growth targets to date and is firmly on track to meet the recycling targets of 800,000 tonnes of recycled PVC per year by 2020.

Being the first Recovinyl partner in our industry Kestrel has shown over the last decade that we are fully committed to recycling. As a responsible manufacturer, Kestrel aims to provide consistent PVC products with no imperfections whilst adhering to ISO14001 environmental standards. We recycle 100% of our production waste.

Furthermore, we apply the same level of commitment to post-consumer waste in all its forms. This includes recycling the small proportion of product that is ordered incorrectly or damaged in transport on its way to a site and the off cuts from installation (i.e. Short Life A Grade post-consumer waste), as well as the product taken off a property when for example the roofline is being replaced (i.e. Long Life, B Grade, post-consumer waste) at the end of that products life cycle.

Kestrel is committed to reduce its carbon footprint through using environmentally kind stabilisers in the skin and core of their product.

As an organisation we minimise waste, promote recycling, reduce energy consumption, reduce harmful emissions and where possible, to work with suppliers who themselves have sound environmental policies.
